WILL INSTALL WATER METERS

Council Instructs City Attorney to Draw up an Amendment to the Water Ordinance.

CONSUMERS TO PAY FREIGHT

Special Committee Makes Report and
Dr. Parsons Will go on Looking For Pumps.

The water situation was again the chief topic of discussion at the council meeting last night. It was mostly talk, as no definite action was taken. The talk consisted mainly about water meters and a pump for one of the new wells at the foot of Julian street.

Councilman Parsons, as chairman of the special water committee, again brought to the attention of the council the advisability of installing a pump in the well at the corner of Julian and First streets. The water from this well would be pumped directly into the mains. The pump would be run by a ten horse power motor and the water would go into the mains under forty pounds pressure. A representative of a pump company was present and explained the pump to the council. His estimate of the cost was $1012 to $1090.

It was stated at a meeting some time ago that the water from this well would greatly increase the present supply as the well gives 100 gallons a minute. Dr. Parsons was very anxious that the council take some action but all that was done was to receive his report and continue the committee. "I suppose, your honor," said Dr. Parsons to Mayor Black, "that means I am to go on looking for pumps."

"Yes," replied Mayor Black, "and wells also, doctor."

Dr. Parsons said that as it was almost time for the city treasurer to make out the water bills for 1912 it would be well for the city to start the meter system. Councilman Parsons suggested that water meters be installed as soon as the weather permitted. His plan was to have every consumer pay for his own meter which would cost about ten dollars. "This is the only way to save the water," said Dr. Parsons. It was pointed out that the city loses money by maintaining a flat rate. The gas companies were given as an example. When gas was plentiful the companies charged a flat rate and only in recent years have they installed meters. The city attorney was instructed to frame an amendment to the water ordinance so the city can install water meters. The amendment will be reported at the next meeting.

Two petitions of the Rushville Furniture Company were referred to the water and light committee. One was for a fire alarm box and the other was for the privilege of tapping the city water mains.

The report of the finance committee showed that the yearly reports of the clerk and treasurer had been audited and found to be correct. The report was ordered placed on file. The report of the city treasurer for the month of January was referred to the finance committee.

The clerk was instructed to issue an order to A. R. Herkless for $240.-61 for the West Ninth street improvement. The treasurer's report showed that all the property owners had signed waivers with the exception of one. That was Josie Ray. It has been impossible to locate the woman and after further investigation and if she is not located, the property will be sold for the taxes.

The report of the fire chief stated that James and Henry Gregg had resigned from the fire department and asked for their "time."

MOTHER FOR IT AND FATHER "AGIN" IT

Perry Ryse of Near Milroy Forbade
His Daughter, Lulu, 16, to Wed
Wm. Brooks, 32.

BEAT WIFE HERE BY A NOSE

The House of Ryse, located a mile south of Milroy, is divided against itself. This morning Lulu Ryse, Perry's daughter; her mother; William Brooks; his mother, with two suit cases and another bundle—Lulu and William apparently being prepared for a honeymoon of some pretensions—appeared at the clerk's office and applied for a marriage license. But woe was pictured in Lulu's and William's face, as well as in that of those of which they were the offsprings, when the clerk told them Father Perry had already been there and forbade his daughter being married.

Although Lulu was only sixteen and William was just twice as old, both mothers were heartily in favor of the match. The clerk suggested the company repair in search of Perry and see if his wrath could not be appeased.

"I've seen enough of him already," snapped Perry's wife.

It was suggested that the prospective son-in-law buy Perry a cigar and some apples and both mothers coax him, but they couldn't see it in that light. The clerk told them to appeal to the court to overrule the father's prerogative, but they refused to do that. It developed that the proposed match developed into a race from Milroy this morning, father winning by a nose. The wedding party left on the I. & C.

He was found guilty in a justice of the peace court in Knightstown and paid a fine of $5 and costs.

WILSON CASE IS CONTINUED

ed Fur Thief is Left on the Docket.

ATTORNEY WANTED IT NOLLED

Argument Heard This Morning and Court Closed This Afternoon
When Judge Left.

The court was "dark" this afternoon, Judge Blair leaving about noon for his home in Shelbyville to spend the night. Arguments in the partition suit in the estate of Bartholomew Quirk were heard by the court this morning, but no decision was returned. Nothing of importance is slated for tomorrow.

The case of the State vs. Thomas Wilson, who was charged with complicity in the theft of eighty dollars worth of furs from the home of Lon Bowles in Center township, which was set down for trial in the circuit court today, was continued indefinitely today. The case was scratched off the court calendar, but still remains on the criminal docket.

Wilson's pal, Albert Becraft, was sent up for a term of one to fourteen years during last term of court and is now serving his sentence. Wilson was arraigned, tried and the jury disagreed. Wilson was released on bond and went to his home in Greensburg. A sanity commission examined him and found him to be of unsound mind and he was sent to the southeastern asylum for the insane at Madison.

It was the theory of attorneys for Wilson that the charge against Wilson should be quashed since he is in the insane asylum and is declared to be of unsound mind. His attorneys asked the prosecuting attorney to move that the court nolle the charge, but the State's attorney refused on the ground that Wilson might be released as cured and the case could still be tried.

Wilson was the prosecuting witness in the Becraft hearing and it was suggested at the time of the announcement that Wilson had been declared insane and that this might make a good contention for a motion for a new trial for Becraft since he had been found guilty largely on testimony of a man who later was found to be insane. This was never acted upon, however.

The case of Wilson vs. Hardin was set down today for trial on Wednesday, February 28. The damage suit of Herkless against P. A. Miller was set down for trial on Tuesday, March fifth. The plaintiff in this case alleges the defendant's machine frightened his horse and caused it to run away. The case of the State on relation of Greeley vs. Hooten et al., which was to be tried one week from today, was set down for Monday, March fourth.

PREACHES AND SELLS INSURANCE

The Rev. Ambrose Newhouse of Grant
County Finds Side-Line
Lucrative

HE IS VISITING HERE NOW

One-Time Composer and Writer of Verse Surprises Old Chums
"Who Knew Him When—"

It's now the Rev. Ambrose Newhouse, thank you, of Grant county, Indiana, former Rush county farmer, song writer and poetic genius. The Rev. Ambrose is now visiting relatives and friends in this county. He will be remembered here, especially by young men with whom he chummed while residing in this city when a boy.

Besides preaching Ambrose is an insurance agent. He works at this through the week and preaches on Sunday. He finds some leisure time during the week, while he is about the duties of his avocation which makes him a little sparer change, to prepare his sermons.

At the insurance business Ambrose is no slouch even though it is a side-line. When the company by which he is employed entertained its agents with a banquet in Indianapolis recently, Ambrose sat at the table at the head of the banquet hall with the select eighteen.

This select eighteen consisted of agents who had sold $100,000 or more insurance in a year. Ambrose had not been with the company for a year at the time of the banquet but he had made the necessary average to give the added prestige of being seated with the favorite few. The Rev. Ambrose being the only preacher-insurance agent in the banquet hall, was requested to ask the blessing which he did most graciously.

But friends of Ambrose in the days when he was a boy in Rushville will recall that he never gave any promise of being a minister of the Gospel. Far be it from him to ever have any such ideas when a youth.

At that time there was an organization of boys in the high school which was known as the Rushville Temperance League, commonly called the R. T. L. Charles Wilson, now of Chicago; Roy Aldridge of Pittsburg, Pa.; Roy Aultman of New Orleans; Rol Petty of Connersville; Hugh Green of Indianapolis; Eugene Miller of Harvard University; Lawrence Geraghty, now deceased; Claude Simpson of Roswell, New Mexico; Joe Ong of Pittsburg, Pa.; Warne Carmichael of Chicago, and Birney Spradling, Roy Harrold and Miles Cox of this city were some of the members.

Among other things the members of this organization had to forswear the use of tobacco and any intoxicating liquor. The by-laws provided that any member caught violating the rules of the society, and if it could be proved satisfactory to a court of inquiry, he should be fined five cents for each and every offense. Some difficulty was experienced in obtaining evidence but quite a few fines were collected at that.

But Ambrose was the obstreperous member. He persisted in chewing tobacco. And he would take a puff of a cigar occasionally. He was warned to cease his violations or he might be expelled. He paid his fines—sometimes. Finally after a stormy meeting in which the Newhouse faction and its opponents were at war during the whole evening it was voted to expel Ambrose. It was never really understood whether or not Ambrose was expelled. Some of the members regretted their action and Ambrose continued to attend the meetings. Born and reared on the farm where he learned the habit while shucking corn, he could hardly do without his chew once in a while. But Ambrose was a good fellow, well met, and popular, and he still was a temperance adherent.

In his later days he got the music bug and composed several songs, one of which was published, if the memory of most of his friends around here does not fail them. But Ambrose will not allow you to mention that song about the twilight, stars or something of the sort, in his presence. Those are by-gone days. He wrote some verses of poetry, but he recovered from that, too.

But, no joking, Ambrose is somewhat of a preacher. He has a host of admirers up Grant county way—but nothing compared to those he has in Rush county. Last night he preached to a few of his old friends and relatives at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Eliza Newhouse, at 223 East Second street. He observed at the beginning of his sermon that he would rather face the largest audience of intelligent people ever assembled than talk to those who know him best. But he emerged triumphantly and relatives and old friends are proud of Ambrose.

ments Local Sanitorium.

Mrs. J. D. France, mother of Mrs. C. M. Yocum, before returning to her home in West Middletown, Pa., had some fine things to say about Rushville, her people and her institutions. While here Mrs. France underwent an operation in the Sexton sanitorium. Though she lives within an hour's car ride of Pittsburg, Pa., where there are fine hospitals and sanitoriums, Mrs. France rejoices that she came to Rushville for her operation. She thinks the Sexton sanitorium, its surgeon, doctors, and nurses second to none in the country.

REACHES AGE OF NINETY-ONE YEARS

Mrs. Sarah J. Millikan Probably Oldest Woman in County, Enjoys Good Health.

LIVES WITH HER DAUGHTER

Mrs. Sarah J. Millikan reached the ninety-first milestone in life's Marathon today. Mrs. Millikan makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Gray, in North Perkins street. The day was celebrated in a quiet manner by Mrs. Millikan, who is probably the oldest woman in the county.

At ninety-one years of age, Mrs. Millikan enjoys the best of health and today was sitting at her usual place by the fireside. For a number of years she has been blind and with this exception her faculties are good. Mrs. Millikan was born February 7, 1821, about eight miles from Hamilton, Ohio. In 1843, she was married to Daniel Millikan, son of Dr. Daniel Millikan, who was one of the early settlers of Butler county and the first physician. Mr. Millikan died in 1855. At the time of his death all but one of the seven children were living. Of the family of seven, Mrs. Gray and Mrs. T. H. Seicrist of Anderson, are living. Mrs. Millikan spent most of her life in Ohio, and has made her home with Mrs. Gray for the past twenty-five years. Mrs. Millikan has four grand children and four great grandchildren.

"We have always had a family dinner on mother's birthday," said Mrs. Gray, "but owing to the cold weather, we did not attempt it this year."

TO DEFENSE OF GAME PRESERVES

Fred Cutter of Indianapolis, Who Circulated Petition For Local One,
Writes of Game Laws.

HISTORY OF THEIR MAKING

Hunting Licenses Decided to be Only Equitable Means of Collecting a Revenue.

Fred P. Cutter of Indianapolis, locally related and well known here, where he often visits, has addressed the following to the Daily Republican in reply to a recent article in this paper concerning game laws:

On the unsigned article of the 6th on game preserves I have the following to say: The long delay in establishing a practical and efficient scheme for enforcing game laws in the United States, was due more to lack of financial means than any other cause. Only a small part of the people in each locality hunted, and the suggestion to levy a special tax or to appropriate funds from the general treasury for the support of a warden-ship excited strong opposition. It was argued that citizens who, from lack of inclination or convenience do not hunt should not be taxed for the maintenance of the sport. So strong was the sentiment that advocates of game preservation undertook to find a way by which the laws could be so framed as to provide funds for their own enforcement.

A provision was inserted in the game law providing that the informer should be entitled to a moiety of the fine or that the game warden should receive the whole of it. But competent men were not readily found to work for such uncertain and inadequate compensation and the game laws were not enforced in many localities. Finally, within the last twelve years, the hunting license system as a means of raising revenue for game protection has proved to be more successful and more equitable than any other, since those that hunt are directly benefitted by the enforcement of game laws contribute the funds for the protection of game. Since the inauguration of this method nearly every State has established a game department and support their departments wholly from hunting license fees.

If all the land was enclosed in a preserve there would be no source of revenue. These preserves are distributed as equally in the different counties as possible, and are anywhere from three to four thousands acres, joined together, making from four to six square miles in each.

Rush county has one comprising four thousand acres of land situated east of Rushville, taking in all of Union township and parts of another. It is evident the writer of that item that appeared in the Republican did take some stock in the preserves at one time from the fact of him having tried to establish one in his neighborhood, and having failed, declares it is the biggest legal farce he knows of.

Reports from the different preserves to the game commissioner show wonderful increases in the number of quail and partridge. The year 1911 shows 216 arrests and convictions on these preserves of violations of the game law.

These preserves not only afford a protection to the game, but the game-warden renders aid to the farmer in enforcing the trespass laws, with telephone connections make it possible to quickly reach the scene of trespass and ready response greatly reduce the number of offenses.

Fair tonight and Thursday. Colder in north portion tonight.

GOT AN INJUNCTION AGAINST THE TRUST Steel Corporation Must Not Burn Any More Records.

Washington, Feb. 7.—For violations of the Sherman anti-trust law, under the so-called steel wire pooling agreements which were conducted under the leadership of the American Steel and Wire companies of New Jersey, the United States government will seek further indictments. In papers filed by the department of justice in Trenton in connection with the dissolution suit of the United States Steel corporation it is intimated plainly that the government hopes to include officials of the steel corporation in these criminal proceedings. The federal government charges, in fact, that James A. Farrell, now president of the steel corporation, not only was cognizant of the unlawful pooling arrangements conducted under the lead of the steel and wire company, but aided and abetted the alleged unlawful practices.

These statements are contained in a petition which the federal government filed with Judge Gray in the United States circuit court at Trenton asking for an injunction restraining the steel corporation and its subsidiaries from destroying papers that the government may want in the prosecution of its dissolution suit against the steel trust. The government charges that a trunkful of papers and documents, several thousand in number, already have been destroyed. The government's petition adds that documents that have been destroyed in this batch tended to show that President Farrell of the steel corporation had knowledge of the alleged unlawful pooling agreement. The government asked for an injunction on the ground that there was reason to believe that other valuable documents might be destroyed. Judge Gray granted the restraining order.

Beautiful Creations of Art as St. Valentine's Day Draws Near

The Valentine season is now at hand, in just two weeks the day will arrive when the timorous lover, in accordance with time honored custom may send a tender missive to the damsel of his heart without exciting any undue comment.

Valentine's day, as every one knows, comes on Friday 14, and already Rushville merchants are busy unpacking stocks of the little love messages. Valentine day originally was a very simple occasion. The sender of the missive went to the store, made his purchase of a tender or comic epistle, as he desired, placed a stamp on the corner of the envelope and let the mail man do the rest.

Now however, things have changed. Valentine parties are very popular, the children make valentines in school and the book of live poems is often given in place of the old-fashioned valentine.

Valentine parties are going to be more popular than ever this year. Already a number of society people are preparing for them. The house is usually decorated with hearts and arrows, the prevailing colors red and white or pink and white. Paper napkins and table cloths with appropriate designs can now be purchased at a low price and all of the decorations can be had already made without a great outlay of money. Formerly only red and white was used as a color scheme, but now pink and white is the most popular. Pink is more delicate than red and is being found more acceptable this year. When there is card playing at a valentine party the game is usually hearts, but there are many other amusements even more appropriate to the occasion. The women's magazine this time of year are usually full of guessing contests and other valuable ideas.

The style of valentine is changing, too. The old lace and celluloid creations, so dear to the hearts of the past generations, are giving way to handpainted valentines and gift books of poems or romances tied in appropriate colors with a valentine greeting inclosed.

The old comic valentine is going to deserved oblivion. Every one remembers the caricature of the old maid, the gossip, the dishonest tradesmen, the lazy man, and so on, and the vicious verses which were usually appended. These valentines were sometimes sent in a spirit of fun and so accepted, but evil minded persons often used them as the means of satisfying a petty revenge in a cowardly manner. Nearly everyone had had his feelings wounded by one of these caricatures and many estrangements have resulted from them. There are still comic valentines, but they are of a more subdued kind, without the biting sting of sarcasm.

More valentines are being sent each year, but they are becoming less expensive. The prices now range from one cent to $3, with the children usually sending the cheaper one, and the fellow in real love, buying the high priced creations. Children in the public schools are now painting valentines and the youngsters in the free kindergartens are manufacturing little missives for February 14.

The post card valentine is getting more popular every year and is an appropriate little memento for the occasion.

The great problem for the merchant is to buy enough valentines to supply the demand and not to have any left over, as they are dead stock. Some concerns sell to the merchant on commission, taking back the missives unsold, but this plan is generally unsatisfactory as the prices are much higher.

Kidding Kid McCoy

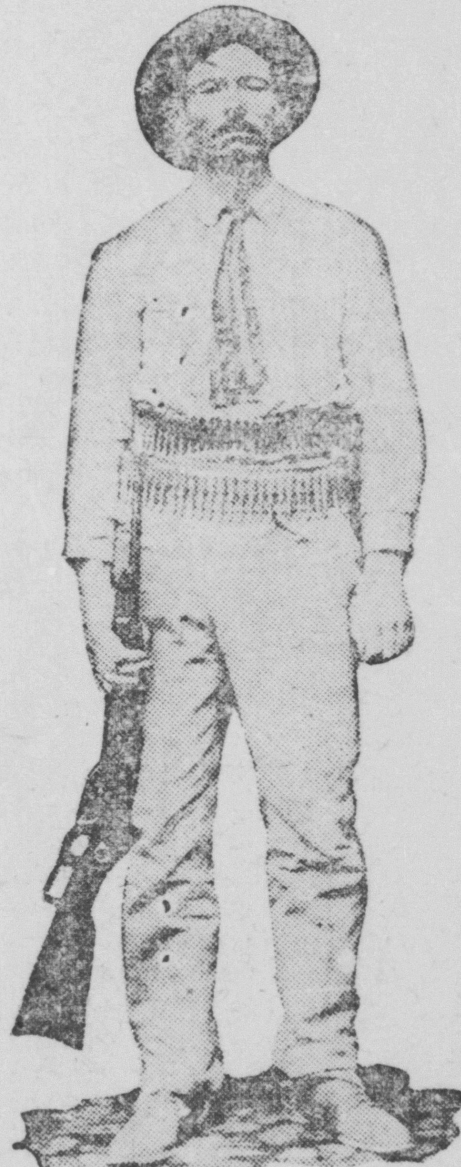

Writing from Paris anent the introduction of Kid McCoy, the native Rush countyite and former pride of the old Indianapolis levee district, to the social favorites of the French capital in the hall of the National Sporting club, Marcel Boulenger pictures the American athlete and boxer in evening dress, goes into ecstacy over what he terms the beauty of the scene and concludes thusly:

"Kid McCoy ascended the steps with ease. He could well afford to wear a coat which did not, perhaps, come up to the height of fashion. The word 'elegance' seemed to have been specially created for this descendant of the great Olympic athletes. It was neither the nerveless, sickly elegance, as some of the primitive depict it, nor the languid grace of decadence. Far from either, it was with a majestic, nearly disdainful freedom that he walked and carried his head; his strength, broad shoulders, straight figure, conveyed an impression of health, power and calmness. He held court as a king might do it. What a joy it was to behold this Hercules, slim like a young tree, this pugilist with muscles of iron, who carried himself like a prince in the middle of the ring. I should have liked to see the expression on the faces of the various young dandies who idle away their time around our elegant bars or of our poor young actors, who had hitherto believed fondly that a man can buy elegance at his tailors. But elegance must be contained in the framework of a man, and then in his deportment."

DICTAGRAPH STORY BADLY DISCREDITED

Other Stenographers Confirm Blumenberg's Opinion.

Washington, Feb. 7.—In the Lorimer investigation two of the stenographers employed in general official reporting at the capitol appeared on the stand, as expert witnesses and corroborated the opinion of Milton W. Blumenberg that the stenographic notes submitted as evidence by J. A. Sheridan were fabricated. The witnesses were H. H. Pechin, who testified that he had had twenty-five years' experience as a shorthand writer and had been employed for several years reporting committee hearings and other official work, and Allister Cochran, who for ten years has been a reporter of official debates in the house of representatives. This testimony has impressed the committee with the importance of going more fully into the question of the authenticity of the stenographer's notes of W. J. Burns's dictagraph operator. Other expert witnesses will be called and the Burns stenographer will be recalled to the stand and be required to give a physical demonstration of his capacity to report a conversation under the circumstances which he alleges surrounded his taking of the conversation between Detective Bailey, Harry Kerr and Charles McGowan in the hotel at Toronto.

The Water Question.

Another council meeting has been held and nothing has been accomplished looking toward the harassing water question. Now is the time to relieve the local conditions, as all are agreed, yet the council is dallying along with it until warm weather will be here and the same trying ordeals will have to be passed through with next summer. But each summer they will be worse.

It was reported that the council would consider last night the purchasing or leasing of land northwest of the city for drilling wells, but this subject was not so much as mentioned. This plan has been suggested and has been talked by councilmen, but so far no definite step in that direction has been taken.

Instead the councilmen talked water meters and pumps and got no place, with the exception of the instruction to the city attorney that he draw up an amendment to the city water ordinance providing for the installation of water meters to measure water instead of selling it at a flat rate as is now done. The city council figures that this is the only method by which the water waste can be stopped.

Let's suppose the city does install meters, which it will most likely do, who will pay for the meters? They will cost ten dollars each, and it is likely, as was suggested last night, that the patrons will have to lay down ten dollars for a meter or else do without water. Not many can do without water, and the result will be that about fourteen hundred Rushville householders will have to raise a ten dollar bill in some manner. The city would, of course, agree to refund the ten dollars whenever the householder discontinued the use of city water.

But the council might be fair and split even with the patrons of the plant. The city might spend five dollars and let the patron invest the other five under the same conditions as above. That is the plan followed by the independent gas companies when their patrons use a meter.

But how could the city do this—pay five dollars on the meters and charge the other five to the user? It is near its bonded indebtedness right now, and to borrow more money will soon be an impossibility. It was pointed out when the tax rate was fixed for this year that the city should raise the rate, or else it would be without funds and tied down by indebtedness. But the council would not raise the rate. Democratic economy?

Last summer the council spent a goodly sum of money digging dry holes in various parts of the city. Finally they found a well at the foot of Julian street that gave some prospects. The well showed 140,000 gallons a day in a twenty-four hour test. It is estimated this well would give each of the 1,400 patrons from 100 to 120 gallons a day more than at present. This, it is said, would relieve the conditions to a great extent. But the council has no assurance that this well will hold out while a district where overflowing wells abound would undoubtedly furnish unlimited supply.

But another question arises. It will cost the city approximately $1,100 to attach that well to the mains. Instead of voting last night to advertise for bids for a pump to force the water from this well, they postponed action. The pump would not be installed until the first week in April had the council advertised for bids last night. As it is now it will be the third week in April if they advertise for bids at the next meeting.

These figures prove that: The law provides the advertisement for bids shall have been run at stated periods for three weeks before offers are received. It is estimated that it would require four weeks for the pump to get here after the contract had been awarded and one week for installation. The proposed pump would have an automatic apparatus which would cause it to stop working when the water in the reservoir was up to the fire pressure limit.

The water question has been a vexing one for several years and the city council would do well by making satisfactory arrangements before hot days arrive. Last summer few people above Fourth street could get any water upstairs. Most of the summer, patrons were not allowed to sprinkle. They had paid water rent in advance and then could not get that for which the city already had the money. The results will be that many patrons will object to paying water rent in advance in the future until they are assured that they will get value received.

The House of Ryse is divided against itself. Father doesn't want his sixteen-year-old daughter to marry and mother does. What's to be done? Whose boss? Father said she should not and the clerk heeded his warning. There ought to be some food for thought in that for married women who suffer from the hallucination that they are the main squeeze.

"A Man Over at Richmond Who Does Not Like Theodore Roosevelt" is a headline in the Indianapolis Star today. This is surprising, indeed. We never once supposed there was a Taft adherent in all of Wayne county.

"Yes, dear, and I must tell you that it was not his frightful threats when setting me free that helped me to keep my word, but the harrowing sob which he gave on the threshold of the tomb. . . . That sob attached me to the unfortunate man more than I myself suspected when saying good-bye to him. Poor Erik! Poor Erik!"

"Christine," said Raoul, rising, "you tell me that you love me; but you had recovered your liberty hardly a few hours before you returned to Erik! Remember the masked ball!"

"Yes; and do you remember those hours which I passed with you, Raoul . . . to the great danger of both of us?"

"I doubted your love for me, during those hours."

"Do you doubt it still, Raoul?"

Then know that each of my visits to Erik increased my horror of him; for each of those visits, instead of calming him, as I hoped, made him mad with love! . . . And I am so frightened, so frightened! . . .

"You are frightened . . . but do you love me? If Erik were good-looking, would you love me, Christine?"

She rose in her turn, put her two trembling arms round the young man's neck and said:

"Oh, my betrothed of a day, if I did not love you, I would not give you my lips! Take them, for the first time and the last."

He kissed her lips; but the night that surrounded them was rent asunder, they fled as at the approach of a storm and their eyes, filled with dread of Erik, showed them, before they disappeared, high up above them, an immense night-bird that stared at them with its blazing eyes and seemed to cling to the string of Apollo's lyre.

CHAPTER XIII.

A Master-Stroke of the Trap-Door Lover.

Raoul and Christine ran, eager to escape from the roof and the blazing eyes that showed only in the dark; and they did not stop before they came to the eighth floor on the way down.

There was no performance at the opera that night and the passages were empty. Suddenly, a queer-looking form stood before them and blocked the road:

"No, not this way!"

And the form pointed to another passage by which they were to reach the wings. Raoul wanted to stop and ask for an explanation. But the form, which wore a sort of long frock-coat and a pointed cap, said:

"Quick! Go away quickly!"

Christine was already dragging Raoul, compelling him to start running again.

"But who is he? Who is that man?" he asked.

Christine replied: "It's the Persian."

"What's he doing here?"

"Nobody knows. He is always in the opera."

"You are making me run away, for the first time in my life. If we really saw Erik, what I ought to have done was to nail him to Apollo's lyre, just as we nail the owls to the walls of our Breton farms; and there would have been no more question of him."

"My dear Raoul, you would first have had to climb up to Apollo's lyre; that is no easy matter."

"The blazing eyes were there!"

"Oh, you are getting like me now, seeing him everywhere! What I took for blazing eyes was probably a couple of stars shining through the strings of the lyre."

And Christine went down another floor, with Raoul following her.

"As you have quite made up your mind to go, Christine, I assure you it would be better to go at once. Why

Folks Past Fifty Must Use Cascarets

What Glasses Are to Weak Eyes, Cascarets Are to Weak Bowels—A Ten Cent Box Will Amaze You.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash cannot be used every day. What the bowels need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. Then only such tonic is Cascarets and they are only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

wait for tomorrow? He may have heard us tonight."

"No, no, he is working, I tell you, at his Don Juan Triumphant and not thinking of us."

"You're so sure of that you keep on looking behind you!"

"Come to my dressing-room."

"Hadt'n't we better meet outside the opera?"

"Never, till we go away for good! It would bring us bad luck, if I did not keep my word. I promised him to see you only here."

"It's a good thing for me that he allowed you even that. Do you know," said Raoul bitterly, "that it was very plucky of you to let us play at being engaged?"

"Why, my dear, he knows all about it! He said, 'I trust you, Christine. M. de Chagny is in love with you and is going abroad. Before he goes, I want him to be as happy as I am.' Are people so unhappy when they love?"

"Yes, Christine, when they love and are not sure of being loved."

They came to Christine's dressing-room.

"Why do you think that you are safer in this room than on the stage?" asked Raoul. "You heard him through the walls here, therefore he can certainly hear us."

"No. He gave me his word not to be behind the walls of my dressing-room again and I believe Erik's word. This room and my bedroom on the lake are for me, exclusively, and not to be approached by him."

"How can you have gone from this room into that dark passage, Christine? Suppose we try to repeat your movements; shall we?"

"It is dangerous, dear, for the glass might carry me off again; and, instead of running away, I should be obliged to go to the end of the secret passage to the lake and there call Erik."

"Would he hear you?"

"Erik will hear me wherever I call him. He told me so. He is a very curious genius. You must not think, Raoul, that he is simply a man who amuses himself by living underground. He does things that no other man could do; he knows things which nobody in the world knows."

"Take care, Christine, you are making a ghost of him again!"

"No, he is not a ghost; he is a man of heaven and earth, that is all."

"A man of heaven and earth . . . that is all! A nice way to speak of him! . . . And are you still resolved to run away from him?"

"Yes, tomorrow."

"Tomorrow, you will have no resolve left!"

"Then, Raoul, you must run away with me in spite of myself; is that understood?"

"I shall be here at twelve tomorrow night; I shall keep my promise, whatever happens. You say that, after listening to the performance, he is to wait for you in the dining-room on the lake?"

"Yes."

"And how are you to reach him, if you don't know how to go out by the glass?"

"Why, by going straight to the edge of the lake."

Christine opened a box, took out an enormous key and showed it to Raoul.

"What's that?" he asked.

"The key of the gate to the underground passage in the Rue Scribe."

"I understand, Christine. It leads straight to the lake. Give it to me, Christine, will you?"

"Never!" she said. "That would be treacherous!"

Suddenly Christine changed color. A mortal pallor overspread her features.

"Oh, heavens!" she cried. "Erik! Erik! Have pity on me!"

"Hold your tongue!" said Raoul. "You told me he could hear you!"

But the singer's attitude became more and more inexplicable. She wrung her fingers, repeating, with a distraught air:

"Oh, heaven! Oh, heaven!"

"But what is it? What is it?" Raoul implored.

"The ring . . . the gold ring he gave me."

"Oh, so Erik gave you that ring?"

"You know he did, Raoul! But you don't know that, when he gave it to me, he said, 'I give you back your liberty, Christine, on condition that this ring is always on your finger. As long as you keep it, you will be protected against all danger and Erik will remain your friend. But woe to you if you ever part with it, for Erik will have his revenge!'"

"Woe to us both!"

They both looked for the ring, but could not find it. Christine refused to be pacified.

"It was while I gave you that kiss, up above, under Apollo's lyre," she said. "The ring must have slipped from my finger and dropped into the street! We can never find it. And what misfortunes are in store for us now! Oh, to run away!"

"Let us run away at once," Raoul insisted, once more.

She hesitated. He thought that she was going to say yes. . . . Then her bright pupils became dimmed and she said:

"No! Tomorrow!"

And she left him hurriedly, still wringing and rubbing her fingers, as though she hoped to bring the ring back like that.

Raoul went home, greatly perturbed at all that he had heard.

"If I don't save her from the hands of that humbug," he said, aloud, as he went to bed, "she is lost. But I shall save her."

He put out his lamp and felt a need to insult Erik in the dark. Thrice over, he shouted:

"Humbug! . . . Humbug! . . . Humbug!"

But, suddenly, he raised himself on his elbow. A cold sweat poured from his temples. Two eyes, like blazing coals, had appeared at the foot of his bed. They stared at him fixedly, terribly, in the darkness of the night.

Raoul was no coward; and yet he trembled. He put out a groping, hesitating hand toward the table by his bedside. He found the matches and lit his candle. The eyes disappeared. Still uneasy in his mind, he thought to himself:

"She told me that his eyes only showed in the dark. His eyes have disappeared in the light, but he may be there still."

And he rose, hunted about, went round the room. He looked under his bed, like a child. Then he thought himself absurd, got into bed again and blew out the candle. The eyes reappeared.

He sat up and stared back at them with all the courage he possessed. Then he cried:

"Is that you, Erik? Man, genius, or ghost, is it you?"

He reflected: "If it's he, he's on the balcony!"

Then he ran to chest of drawers and groped for his revolver. He opened the balcony window, looked out, saw nothing and closed the window again. He went back to bed, shivering, for the night was cold, and put the revolver on the table within his reach.

The eyes were still there, at the foot of the bed. Were they between the bed and the window-pane or behind the pane, that is to say, on the balcony? That was what Raoul wanted to know. He also wanted to know if those eyes belonged to a human being. . . . He wanted to know everything.

Then, patiently, calmly, he seized his revolver and took aim. He aimed a little above the two eyes. Surely, if they were eyes and if above those two eyes there was a forehead and if Raoul was not too clumsy . . .

The shot made a terrible din amid the silence of the slumbering house. And, while footsteps came hurrying along the passages, Raoul sat up with outstretched arm, ready to "fire" again, if need be.

This time, the two eyes had disappeared.

Servants appeared, carrying lights; Count Philippe, terribly anxious:

"What is it?"

"I think I have been dreaming," replied the young man. "I fired at two stars that kept me from sleeping."

"You're raving! Are you ill? For God's sake, tell me, Raoul; what happened?"

And the count seized hold of the revolver.

"No, no, I'm not raving. . . . Besides, we shall soon see . . ."

He got out of bed, put on a dressing-gown and slippers, took a light from the hands of a servant and, opening the window, stepped out on the balcony.

The count saw that the window had been pierced by a bullet at a man's height. Raoul was leaning over the balcony with his candle.

"Aha!" he said. "Blood! . . . Blood! . . . Here, there, more blood! . . . That's a good thing! A ghost who bleeds is less dangerous!" he grinned.

"Raoul! Raoul! Raoul!"

The count was shaking him as though he were trying to waken a sleep-walker.

"But, my dear brother, I'm not asleep!" Raoul protested impatiently. "You can see the blood for yourself. I thought I had been dreaming and firing at two stars. It was Erik's eyes . . . and here is his blood! . . . After all, perhaps I was wrong to shoot; and Christine is quite capable of never forgiving me. . . . All this would not have happened if I had drawn the curtains before going to bed."

"Raoul, have you suddenly gone mad? Wake up!"

"What, still? You would do better to help me find Erik . . . for, after all, a ghost who bleeds can always be found."

The count's valet said:

"That is so, sir; there is blood on the balcony."

The other man-servant brought a lamp, by the light of which they examined the balcony carefully. The marks of blood followed the rail till they reached a gutter-spout; then they went up the gutter-spout.

"My dear fellow," said Count Philippe, "you have fired at a cat."

"The misfortune is," said Raoul, with a grin, "that it's quite possible. With Erik, you never know. Is it Erik? Is it the cat? Is it the ghost? No, with Erik, you can't tell!"

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

MUST FOLLOW DIRECTIONS.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

"Be sure you are right—then go ahead," said Davy Crockett, the backwoods sage. The saying has no more pertinent application than to the wonder-working of paper bags cookery. Being sure you are right, you can go ahead to admiration. If you are right, you will have none but good words for the process. Otherwise—other words.

Paper bag cookery saves trouble, expense, and time, makes better returns in flavor and substance, and is a sworn foe to dyspepsia. Hence, it is a dispenser of sweetness and light. Whatever helps the great mass to easier and better living is a distinct gain for humanity. Any woman of average intelligence can learn in half an hour, if she pays attention, the essential rudiments of using this system. After that, use will teach the fine points far better than any lecturer or demonstrator could do it.

But it will not do to half-hear or half-remember. If you are a novice, or even a prospective paper bag cook, read over and over the paper bag commandments before beginning—and read them again the next day, and the next, and still the next. They are not perfunctory but vital. Also, in following out recipes given, stick to your text.

Baked Apple Sauce.—Peel and core six firm apples of good flavor, tart rather than sweet. Stick three cloves in each and put bits of mace and cinnamon in the core-spaces. Put them in well-buttered bag with two heaping cups of sugar and half a tumbler of water. Cook thirty minutes. Have the oven very hot at first, but slack heat after seven minutes. Lemon juice instead of water makes a richer-flavored sauce. In that case add half a cup more sugar at the outset.

Apple Pudding.—Beat three fresh eggs very light, add two cups sugar, half a cup creamed butter, the strained juice of a lemon, and the grated yellow peel, a very little salt, half a teaspoonful of powdered cornstarch, a pint of raw grated apple and half a pint of rich milk. Beat hard for several minutes, then pour into a well-buttered bag and bake for thirty minutes in a hot oven. Leave room for the pudding to rise in sealing the bag. Cook on a trivet set upon the grid-shelf. Serve with hard sauce or wine sauce as preferred. This if eaten hot. If eaten cold, whipped cream is the thing for it.

Sweet Potato Pudding.—Make a batter as for apple pudding. Use a cup more sugar, else only half a pint of grated raw sweet potato. Sweet potatoes take as much sugar as crab apples to make them taste sweet. The creamier the milk the better—unless it is creamy increase the proportion of butter. Cook in a well-buttered bag—fifty minutes will not be too long for it. Make a peep-hole in the upper bag—unless the pudding is browned and firm, cook it a while longer.

Banana Pudding.—Beat three eggs light, saving out one white. Add a generous cup of sugar, a cup of stale cake, crumbled fine, half a cup of creamed butter, a cup of milk, beat all together, then add two large or three small bananas, sliced thin, the juice of half a lemon and a teaspoonful of lemon extract. Bake in a very well-buttered bag for thirty minutes.

GOOD THINGS IF CHEAP.

By Nicolas Soyer, Chef of Brooke's Club, London.

Fillet of Beef a la Miroande.—Take a pound and a half of rump steak and cut it into neat slices, about an eighth of an inch thick and two and a half inches long and broad. Dust each of these lightly with black pepper; melt an ounce of butter and skim it free from froth, and add to it as much finely minced garlic as will lie on the point of a very small knife. Lay the fillets in this and let them steep for an hour, turning frequently (the dish must stand in a warm place, or the butter will set). Then take out, put in a well-buttered bag, and place on broiler in the oven, leaving it to cook for half an hour. Meanwhile knead an ounce of flour with an ounce of butter, add to it by degrees a pint of strong well-flavored stock, place in a clean saucepan, and stir all one way until it is the consistency of cream; then add half a pound of previously cooked mushrooms, the juice of half a lemon, freed from seeds, a teaspoonful of China soy, and two drops anchovy essence. Make very hot. Pile the mushrooms in the middle of a hot dish, arrange the fillets around it and garnish with a wall of mashed potato. Serve at once.

Irish Stew.—Cut up two or three pounds of mutton in the ordinary way. Leave very little fat. Add salt and pepper to taste. Add six large onions, peeled and finely chopped, and two pounds of peeled and thinly sliced potatoes and a bunch of sweet herbs. Place in bag and add half a tumbler of cold water. Place on broiler in hot oven. Allow forty minutes. (Copyright, 1911, by Sturgis & Walton Company.)

FOUL BROOD FOUND IN RUSH COUNTY

United States Department of Agriculture Warns Local Keepers of Bees Against Disease.

WHOLE COLONIES DESTROYED

The United States Department of Agriculture calls attention to the fact that American foul brood has been found to exist in Rush county. The department has no means of knowing how long the disease has existed in the region, but desires to notify bee keepers of the trouble and to suggest that, if not already informed concerning the disease, they inform themselves at once. Very frequently colonies of bees are destroyed by disease and the loss is attributed by the bee keeper to some other cause. Farmers' Bulletin No. 442, "The Treatment of Bee Diseases," gives a description of the brood diseases and methods of treatment. It will be sent free on request to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Attention is also called to the fact that the brood diseases do not at all injure honey for human consumption, so that there need be no fear on the part of purchasers of honey.

C. W. DUNCAN, CANDIDATE

Greenfield Attorney Will Make Race For Joint Senator.

Chauncey Duncan of Greenfield, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson of this city, has announced that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination as joint State senator from Rush, Hancock and Fayette counties. He declares that he came to this decision only after being urged by his friends. He promises to make a personal canvass of the district if nominated. Mr. Duncan was a Republican nominee for prosecuting attorney in Greenfield in 1908 and lead the ticket, but was not elected due to the large Democratic majority in Hancock county.

"BIG BROTHER" BANQUET.

The "Big Brother" banquet will be held at the First Presbyterian church this evening at six-thirty o'clock. It is thought that at least one hundred men will attend. A tasty menu has been prepared and some after-dinner speeches will be heard.

Today he announced that that it was no longer an open question—he would not be the secretary of the committee.
